

Greenback Expat Tax Services Launches 2018 Survey to Encourage US Expats to Share Opinions on Expat Taxes, Tax Reform, Government Representation, and Political Priorities

Leading expat tax preparation service encourages US expats to share their opinion in order to protect and promote American interests abroad

(PRWEB) March 28, 2018

Greenback Expat Tax Services announces the launch of its 2018 US Expat Opinion Survey, open until May 15, 2018, to the nearly 9 million American expatriates around the world.

Greenback, which specializes in providing tax services and consulting for 8000+ US expats living in over 212 countries and territories, is conducting the survey to discover expats' views about US taxes, tax reform, FATCA regulations, Foreign Bank Accounting Reporting requirements, citizenship renunciation, government representation and more.

"Each year, our annual US Expat Opinion Survey asks US expats to share their thoughts on the American taxation system as well as broader issues relevant to them," says David McKeegan, Co-Founder of Greenback Expat Tax Services. "The results of the survey function as a collective voice for the 9 million expats living abroad. Greenback amplifies that voice by sharing the information with those best positioned to advocate on their behalf. Our focus has always been to protect and promote the interests of Americans living overseas."

Last year's survey compiled responses from over 2,100 expats, and the findings were consistent with prior years of Greenback survey data: expats are disappointed by their representation in government, and most do not agree with the current system of taxation. This year, the survey delves deeper into the political concerns that affect Americans living overseas.

Once the survey ends, Greenback will compile the findings to share with journalists and other expat advocates. This information can be obtained by emailing info\(at\)greenbacktaxservices\(dot\)comgreenbacktaxservices(dot)com). Greenback will also be selecting one survey responder to win a $1,000 Hotels.com gift card to show appreciation for the feedback.
